Still The Ultimate Symbol of Success

Of the few international prestige cars available, the Mercedes 600 is acknowledged to be the most technically advanced. Everything which can contribute to the safety, comfort and well-being of the driver and passengers has been incorporated in this magnificent saloon. A V8 fuel-injection engine gives the 600 a cruising speed of over 120 m.p.h. Extremely powerful brakes and a unique system of self-levelling air suspension permit such performance to be used in complete safety. Power-steering, 4-speed automatic transmission, hydraulic operation of windows, seat adjustment, boot lid—even the closing of the doors is hydraulically assisted—are but a few of the refinements which contribute to the comfort, complete relaxation and safety enjoyed by the owner of a 600. As an example of advanced design allied to the highest quality engineering it points the way to the future development of the automobile.

The twin concepts of advanced design philosophy and insistence on the highest attainable engineering standards are characteristically Mercedes. The economical 4-cylinder 190 at £1,727 offers the distinction, comfort and superlative smoothness of Mercedes' motoring at lowest cost. More powerful, but still priced under £2,000, there is the 6-cylinder 220. And for those who require even greater luxury, the Mercedes 220S at £2,328 has additional refinements to please the most fastidious owner.

Also available, the new 1966 200, 230 and 230S models, ranging in price from £1,875 to £2,400. Contact your local Mercedes dealer and arrange a demonstration run.

The dying sun throws down its last golden light into a lake of beckoning water. Darkness takes the land in its blind grip, while nodding grass bids the day goodbye. The road is your link with this world of escape—and on that road you will find National Benzole, ready to serve whenever you wish.

National Benzole Books cover all Britain, with interesting places to see and things to do. Available at all good booksellers, they cost just six shillings each.

seven shades of beauty

Which is yours? Pink, pale, or golden, you'll find just the right one among Yardley's seven foundation tones. Touch it on and see it blend, feather-light...leaving a new lovelier glow on your skin.

There are two formulas for different skin types. Fine or dryish skin needs the emollients and moisturisers contained in Moisture Tint Foundation. And normal or greasier skin needs Feather Foundation. Choose the one which suits your complexion best.

MOISTURE TINT FOUNDATION, 6/10
contains emollients and moisturisers for drier skins.

FEATHER FOUNDATION, 5/10
for normal or greasier skins.

INEXPENSIVE

Under 15s or thereabouts a head

ALPINO RESTAURANT, 42 Marylebone High St, W 1 (WEL 4640). E Bosoni. Dinner 6-11 30. This cellar, underneath a coffee bar, is the original Alpino restaurant (there are branches in New Oxford St and Lower Grosvenor Pl), and, like its two offspring, serves good, reasonably cheap Italian food. Minestrone (2s), pizzas (4s 6d to 6s 9d), pastas (ravioli 4s 3d, lasagne 5s) are good value; the veal and chicken dishes (up to about 10s including vegetables) worth investigating. A noisy and bustling place in the evenings, with rather loud piped music

BERTORELLI'S, 19 Charlotte St, W 1 (MUS 4174). Mr. Bertorelli. Dinner 6-10. C.S. This is the parent of the London Bertorelli restaurants. During the early years of this century it fed one of Britain's most distinguished gastronomes on minestrone, spaghetti and bread for about 6d. Alas, you won't get as much for 6d at Bertorelli's now. But 15s will give you a more than satisfying meal; the pastas, the veal and the calf's head vinaigrette are all good value. Service is sometimes slow. Wines by the carafe; by the bottle rather expensive

CHEUNG CHOW, 186a Broadhurst Gdns, NW 6 (MAI 7549). Meals served from 12 midday to 11 30. This is a small, clean Chinese restaurant almost on top of West Hampstead tube station. There is a range of set meals, starting with a 4s 6d lunch, which should suit every pocket. For only 7s 6d you can sate yourself on sweet and sour pork, beef chop suey, pancake roll and fried rice, and have a pot of tolerable tea or coffee thrown in. The service is quick and polite; the food kept hot on individual hot plates. Licensed

CEYLON TEA CENTRE, 22 Lower Regent St, SW 1 (WHI 8632). Tea Bar 10-6 30; Sat 10-1; C.S. Tea Lounge 12-2 15, 3-6 15; closed Sat and Sun. There are so few places in London where one can get a good afternoon tea that this tea house is mentioned partly for that fact alone. It does it very nicely, too. Also lunch and elevenses, and if you want something not too heavy, an early dinner as well. Of course you must have tea (1s; spiced, mint, cinnamon, orange, lemon, etc) with everything. Good original salad mixtures (about 20 varieties from 1s to 2s 6d) and tip-top pâtisserie. There is a Ceylon Curry in the winter. Only the greedy need spend more than 10s on their lunch.

CRANKS' SALAD TABLE, 22 Carnaby St, W 1 (GER 9431). Daphne Swan, K and D Canter. Meals served continuously from 10 a m to 8 30 p m. Closed Sat & Sun. If you buy your clothes in Carnaby Street, and even if you don't, Cranks' pure foods restaurant is a splendid place for lunch. All vegetarian: home-made soups, fresh and imaginative salads (two for 2s 6d, three for 3s 6d, five for 5s 6d), and an excellent selection of cheeses. Some rather original sweets and cakes. Dandelion as well as Cona coffee, and though some of the other drinks have pretty strange names, none is alcoholic. You should be able to eat quite well for 7s 6d. Afterthoughts: tipping is discouraged and the tinned music isn't pop

DORICE, 169a Finchley Rd, NW 3 (MAI 6301). Mrs Balacs. Meals from 8 a m-11 30 p m. If only there were more restaurants in London like this one, staying open as late and serving such cheap meals. The set lunch and dinner cost only 5s 6d, and the à la carte is no less reasonable: soups (1s 6d), chicken gibles in paprika sauce (4s 6d), zwiebelrostbraten (11s 6d), Kasseler rippenspeer (7s 6d), all with vegetables where appropriate. The Viennese pastries are good. Over 40 wines; by the glass 3s. Service sometimes could be quicker

EALING TECHNICAL COLLEGE CATERING SCHOOL, St Mary's Rd, W 5 (EAL 0162). Principal: Mr Ceserani. Lunch M to F only, during term time. This is not a commercial enterprise; it is a practical demonstration of the lessons the students of the Catering School have learnt in the classroom. A 3-course lunch costs as little as 7s 6d (4-course 10s), and its range and quality will depend on the academic level reached by the class being taught that day. Remember you are acting as a guinea-pig and forgive the occasional mistake in the service. It is necessary to book

GOOD FRIENDS AND NEW FRIENDS, 139 & 185 Salmon La, Limehouse, E 14 (EAS 5541 & 3366). C Cheung. Meals served from 12 noon to about 11 p m. If you want Chinese food at its best and its most authentic you must be prepared to make the journey to Limehouse. It will be well worth the trouble. Give them notice and try such specialties as the whole steamed mullet, whole stuffed duck, Chinese cheese and sausage, and the extraordinary melon soup. Even the more mundane dishes are a gastronomic revelation. A meal of extreme variety and satisfying proportions will cost about 15s to £1 per head. No drinks; off-licence opposite Good Friends

PASTICCERIA AMALFI 31 Old Compton St, W 1 (GER 7284). Mancisi Carconi. Dinner 6-midnight. A small, busy, cheerful and cheap Italian café where the lasagne (4s 6d), cannelloni gratinati al Amalfitano (4s 6d) and the tagliatelle (4s) are as good as anywhere in London and much cheaper. There are standard Italian main dishes from about 5s 6d to 10s 6d. The pastries, and the ice cream naturally, are very good. Wines by the glass 2s 6d

PIZZA HOUSE, 56 Goodge St, W 1 (MUS 9590). Alfredo Olivelli. Dinner 5 30-11. C.S. lunch. A friendly place that never seems to change over the years, though the prices have moved up slightly since I first went there in 1958. The pastas, the pizza pies (of course) from 4s 6d to 6s are excellent value and reliable. Food always hot; service always quick; coffee (Espresso) strong. Wines from 12s 6d and by the glass 2s 3d

SCHMIDT'S, 33 Charlotte St, W 1 (MUS 8932). Mr F Schmidt. Meals served 12-10 30. We all know Schmidt's—that old-fashioned German restaurant on a variety of floors in a variety of long rooms where the food is plain, cheap and wholesome, and the waiting sometimes leaves much to be desired. Whatever the faults, it deserves a place here for the long, authentic and more than reasonably priced menu and wine list. In between frankfurters and sauerkraut (3s 9d) and Holstein Schnitzel (8s) there is a varied choice of German bourgeois dishes. German and English beers on draught; long wine list from about 13s, by the glass from 2s 3d

SHAH RESTAURANT, 124 Drummond St, NW 1 (EUS 1480). Mr Shah. Meals served from noon to 11 p m. Shah's has been most people's favourite Indian restaurant, at some time or the other; for what seems like donkey's years. It is still not very prepossessing, still cheap, and still a favourite with Indian students who want a nostalgic whiff of home cooking. There is the usual range of curries between 2s 6d and 8s 6d of which the chicken korma (6s), prawn and spinach curry (5s 6d) or the mutton vindaloo (a killer, 4s 6d) are good eating. They will fetch wine, if you want

ZIA TERESA, 6 Hans Rd, SW 3 (KEN 7634). Dinner 5 30-11. A splendid, inexpensive and busy restaurant with eager service and very good cooking. The pizza pies, pastas, polpettine (6s 6d), osso buco (9s), and the escalopes (from 7s 6d) are highly reliable. Sweets and coffee good. Moderately priced wine list; carafes of Chianti, by the glass 2s 3d

MEDIUM PRICED

Not more than about 30s-£2 a head

BARON OF BEEF, Gutter La, Gresham St, EC 2 (MON 6961). Mecca Ltd. Dinner 5-9. Closed Sat & Sun. The sort of place London ought to be full of—and isn't. Traditional English food, properly cooked and served by a friendly well-run staff. Scotch sirloin carved from a trolley, Yorkshire pudding and horseradish sauce (12s 6d), steak and kidney pie for the same price, and whitebait with lemon (8s 6d). It is fitting that the vegetables include bubble and squeak (3s). The wine list is large and rather dear but there are carafes and some by the glass

BARQUE AND BITE, Regent's Canal, 15 Prince Albert Rd, NW 1 (GUL 8137). Geoffrey Cassen. Dinner 7-12. Closed Sat lunch. It is interesting that mankind will go and eat meals in the bowels of the earth, at the top of a tower, or floating on the water and pay quite a lot of money for the privilege. No doubt the psychoanalysts have an enlightening answer. If you are one of those who suffer from such compulsions the Barque and Bite will indulge your vice as well as feeding you pretty well. The pâté (5s 6d), an escalope in red wine sauce with cherries (14s 6d) and various ways with hare (from 11s 6d) are worth investigation. Wines from 13s 6d

BLOOM'S, 90 Whitechapel High St, Whitechapel, E 1 (BIS 6001). Sidney Bloom. Meals from 11 a m-10 p m M-Th; 11-1 p m F; 11-midnight Sun; closed Sat. Kosher food doesn't begin and end with salt beef though this is one of the things to be tried at this bustling and cheerful restaurant. Bloom's is probably the best place in London for stuffed kishka, and cholent (a sort of casserole with dumplings). The sweet and sour cabbage and the latkas (fried potato cakes) are rather nice. There are no bookings and it gets crowded, so go early and take your own wine

CHINESE LANTERN, 4 Thackeray St, W8 (WES 4981 & PRO 7333 in the morning). Mr Looi. Dinner only 6.30-midnight. Closed Chinese New Year. This tiny eating house recreates a Festival Dinner in a Chinese home and is as much a sense of occasion as a dinner out. There is no choice and the meal which will be brought to you by the Chinese waitress will go as follows: a soup cooked on your table in little charcoal burners a series of small dishes of pork, scampi and chicken with the usual bean sprouts, rice and noodles, then a meat savoury in paper, and afterwards lychees. All the time there is as much green tea as you want. This will cost about 26s including tea, and, of course, you must book. Don't go too often as the menu doesn't change very frequently. Take your own wine, if you must

DANIA RESTAURANT, 293-5 Railton Rd, SE 24 (BRI 9163). V Svenssen. Meals from mid-day to 11. C.S. There are few enough Scandinavian restaurants in this country, so even when one of those few isn't entirely Danish, but tends to offer chips with everything, it is still worth mentioning. Stick to the national dishes: gaffelbittar (3s), hakkebøf (8s 6d), chicken Silkeborg (10s), or the frikadeller with special red cabbage (8s 6d). They do a Danish apple cake with cream for 2s 9d, which is very good for sweet. Wines from 15s, by the glass 3s 6d.; Danish lagers, and aquavit (3s 6d) more sensible drinking

GEORGE AND VULTURE, 3 Castle Ct, Cornhill, EC3 (HOP 8000 Ext 351). John Gardner (London) Ltd. Lunch only 12-3. Closed Sat and Sun. So many of the really old, or Dickensian, pubs in the City serve such beastly food that it makes a change to recommend one that doesn't. The speciality here, on Thursdays during the oyster season (now, in fact), is Pickwick Pudding, made with steak, kidney, oysters and a special seasoning. This is 10s 6d; other popular dishes are cheaper—steak (8s), chump chops (7s), mixed grill (7s 6d) and gammon rashers (7s 6d). Cheeses (the Stilton is good) and steamed puddings for afters. Rosé in carafe (8s 6d), quarter-bottles and named wines by the glass from 4s; Ind Coope on draught. The George gets very busy by 12.45, and bookings are taken only before 12.30 p.m.

JAMSHID, 6 Glendower Pl, SW 7 (KNI 2309 & KEN 8045). Mr Jamshid. Dinner 6.30-11. This is rather more expensive than most Indian restaurants but it is also rather better than most of them. Even so, it is still possible to have a good and varied meal for less than £1 per head. Kashmiri chicken kebab (11s 9d) is a splendid dish and the mutton curry (7s 6d) is well prepared and properly cooked. If you like mild curry try the bhoota chicken (10s 9d); if you have an asbestos mouth the chicken vindaloo (at the same price) should be hot enough. There are no half-portions here, so don't order too much and be prepared to wait a little. Wines in carafe 14s 9d; the lager at 3s is a better idea

MARTINEZ SPANISH RESTAURANT, 25 Swallow St, W1 (REG 5066 & 4921). F Amhurst. Dinner 6-midnight. The Martinez is one of the few really authentic Spanish restaurants in London, and some delicate lovers of Spain think the decor is as realistic as the food. It is sensible to eat the Iberian specialities: paella Valenciana (15s 6d), cold gazpacho (4s), inkfish in their own ink (8s 6d). Long list of sherries from 3s 6d, and Spanish wines from 16s; in carafes for 13s 6d, by the glass 3s

MARYNKA, 232 Brompton Rd, SW 3 (KEN 6753). Mr Stadnikiewicz. Dinner 6-11. The cooking here is Continental, but the proprietor is Polish and his national cuisine is reflected in the dishes. Start with bortsch (4s 6d hot, 5s 6d cold) then go on to the scampi in dill sauce (14s), grilled chicken Marynka (14s) or veal Marynka with mushrooms, peppers, cheese and anchovies for the same price. The place is small and the service friendly. Wines dearish; some by the glass 3s 6d

LE MIGNON, 2 Queensway, W 2 (BAY 0093). Mrs M Pincus. Dinner 6-midnight. C.M. The authentic Hungarian touches here include a Gipsy orchestra to entertain you in the evenings. Home-made brawn with onions and paprika (3s), goulash with rice or noodles (9s 6d), chicken Hongroise (9s 6d), fantanyeros (29s for 2) served in big helpings. Fifty wines including some estate-bottled Hungarian items; by the glass 3s and 3s 6d

MON PLAISIR, 21 Monmouth St, WC 2 (TEM 7243). J C Viala. No lunches. Dinner 6-10.30. This very popular place looks like a Paris bistro, and just like a Paris bistro serves good French bourgeois food. You must book and you must not be late in claiming your table or you may be turned away. The plat du jour (about 12s 6d) is worth trying, though the entrecôte Mon Plaisir (11s 6d), boeuf Bourguignonne (9s 6d) and the rognons de veau Madère deserve investigation. Beer and wine licence; wine in carafes for 10s 6d, 6s 6d the half

SHEEKEY'S, 29-31 St Martin's Ct, WC 2 (TEM 4118). J Sheekey Ltd. Meals served 12-8.30 (Sat 12-15.30). C.S. A fish restaurant off the southern end of Charing X Road. It is very crowded, for the tables are set rather too close together and you might have to share yours with others. Still, the fish is worth it. Good helpings of stewed eels (6s), dressed crab (8s), lobster soup (6s). The rest of the seafood is steamed: sole (12s 6d), turbot (11s 6d) and salmon (16s) and others, served with either lobster (1s 6d) or parsley (1s) sauce. No sweets, only cheese. Good white wines from 18s 6d; by the glass 4s

SHIRREFF'S RESTAURANT & WINE PARLOUR, 15 Great Castle St, Oxford Cir, W1 (LAN 2125 & 1507). Lunch 12.15-2.45; dinner 5.30-8.30 (Sat lunch only 12-2). C.S. You will get a reliable if unexciting meal at the wine parlour of dishes like green pea soup (1s 3d), paprika chicken and rice (8s) and caramel cream. But the wine list is outstanding and costs little more than shop prices. Sherries from 1s 6d a glass, 15 named wines by the glass 1s 6d to 3s 9d. The choice of Burgundies, clarets and hocks should please the most fastidious and cultivated of oenophiles

SILVER SPUR, 38 Thurlow Pl, SW 7 (KEN 7717). Capt I Pindelski. Dinner 6-11.30. A tiny Polish restaurant which some people think is the best of its kind in London. The bortsch, chłodnik (soup with prawns) and the beef Stroganoff are very good; the chicken Kiev and the veal dish called Bristol are also worth trying. Allow about 30s a head for a full lunch, especially if it includes the Polish cream and sultana pancakes. Flasks of wine, and bottles of lager

SIMPSON'S IN THE STRAND, 100 The Strand, WC 2 (TEM 7131). Lunch 12-3; dinner 6-10. C.S. Simpson's is not for slimmers. The inclusive helpings of body-building potatoes and cabbage with every main course preclude such pastimes. The trolley-borne roasts, the pies, puddings (sweet as well as savoury) and the restaurant's basic Britishness have made Simpson's world famous. You will be able to stuff yourself for less than 20s. The wine list is good and expensive; the Bass on draught well kept; carafes from 13s 6d

SRI LANKA, 19 Childs St, SW 5 (FRE 4116). Mr J Silva. Meals 12-3; 6-midnight; Sat & Sun noon to midnight. Ceylonese food outside Ceylon is rare, and Sri Lanka is possibly Europe's only example of a Ceylonese restaurant. The dishes are Indian-sounding in name, and have a slightly milder taste, but it is still worth asking the waiter to suggest a meal rather than flounder helplessly with the wrong sort of mixtures. You might like to start with the risam (clear pepper soup 1s), then harak mas (a beef curry 5s), badappi iso (fried prawns 6s 6d) or pittu fish (6s 6d), with this you can have hot fried onion sambal or the milder pol sambala, both 1s. Kiri saha pani (curd with honey) for pudding. All wines under 20s; by the glass 2s 6d. Joss-sticks and candlelight

TAVERNA MYKONOS, 3 Heath St, NW 3 (HAM 4300). Lunch (Sat only) 12-3 p.m.; dinner 6-2. The current wave of interest in things Hellenic has encouraged the opening of a number of new Greek restaurants in London. This taverna in the basement of a Spanish coffee bar is already one of the most popular. The national specialities should be chosen: avgolemono (4s 6d), houmos, souvlakia (12s 6d for 3 skewers of beef on rice with onions and tomatoes), dolmades (stuffed vine leaves), and afelia. They give you Turkish delight with your Turkish coffee! Bouzouke melodies are played by the Mykonos strings. Licensed

LA TOQUE BLANCHE, 21 Abingdon Rd, W 8 (WES 5832). G Lourilleron. Dinner 7-10.45. A small, charming and often crowded restaurant with a highly skilled chef/proprietor who is a dab hand at soupe aux poissons, crêpe de fruits de mer (6s 6d), civet de lièvre (12s), langoustines à la façon (13s), and ballotine de volaille Bresane (12s 6d). The cheeses are exceptional. The waiting is expert and supervised by la Patronne. On the wine list is a special connoisseurs' section: about 30 bottles, costing over £2, and very strong on the better Burgundies

EXPENSIVE

Not hard to spend £2 a head, easy to spend very much more

AU SAVARIN, 8 Charlotte St, W1 (MUS 7134). Mr Chris. Mr Theo. Dinner 6-11. C.S. The cost of a meal here won't be small but it will be good value. The menu is large, the cooking good, and the helpings more than enough for normal people. The pâté (6s 6d), scampi Provençale and taramosalata (4s 6d) are good to begin with. Follow them with escalopes (Au Savarin or Bel Paese 10s 6d), or the kidneys in red wine. Good sweet trolley. The wine list is not very cheap; it does include 10 Greek wines from 22s 6d if you have acquired the taste for these; others by the carafe for 15s, by the glass 4s 6d

CAPRICE, Arlington St, W 1 (HYD 5154). Lunch 12.30-3; dinner 6.30-1 a.m. C.S. Possibly one of London's top ten. Nor, if you keep to the fixed price lunch (27s 6d) or dinner (37s 6d), will it bankrupt you. Set meals include many classical French dishes cooked with great skill. Among the specialities, the calf's head vinaigrette, wild duck, baby lamb and noisette de chevreuil Smitane are extremely good. Service impeccable. There is an enormous

wine list, by no means the cheapest in the metropolis

CONNAUGHT HOTEL, Carlos Pl, W1 (GRO 7070). Grill Room 12.30-3, 5.30-11.30. Closed Sat night and at 2 p.m. on Sun. Restaurant 12.30-3, 6.30-11; 12.30-2.30, 6.30-10 on Sun. The restaurant in this large hotel has been described as a "thoroughly civilized place to dine." It's thoroughly civilized at lunchtime as well. The menu is well balanced, the service impressive, the wine list long and interesting and nearly all the bottles cost more than 20s. A daily luncheon dish is usually British but it is for the specialities (which have to be ordered in advance) that the Connaught is really famous; cassiolette de quenelles, medaillon de veau Lucullus, suprême de volaille Carlos. The tables d'hôte are from 30s, and main dishes à la carte from 15s 6d upwards. If you are feeling mean, there are carafe wines from 16s 6d

THE DIPLOMAT, 20 Mount St, W1 (MAY 3200). Manager: Charles Bradshaw. Dinner 7-11.45. This is Guy Gluckstein's new prestige restaurant, which he has designed to give you the finest food in as fine a setting as possible. The decor has already received some rather hard knocks (journalistically), and whether they achieve their aim with the food only time (and our pockets) can tell. Prices start at 30s for a three course table d'hôte, the cost of your meal being determined solely on the price of the main dish chosen. Only oysters and caviar are charged extra. Wines carefully chosen and priced to match the menu. Not yet proven, as a Scottish jury might say

DORCHESTER HOTEL, Park La, W1 (MAY 8888). manager: Mr Tony Terroni. Dinner 6.30-12 (Grill Room), 6.30-1.45 (Terrace Room). Terrace Room closed Sun. How small the Dorchester looks against the modern glass and concrete giants towering nearby, but how much better the food is compared to that served in the new monoliths. The Terrace Room and Grill have similar menus, though the former offer specialities which are cooked at your table. It also boasts a 12-piece band. You need only spend about £7 for a 3-course dinner for two at the Dorchester, and have a bottle of champagne as well

HUNTING LODGE, Lower Regent St, SW 1 (WHI 4222). Lunch 12.30-3; dinner 6.30-11. C.S. This is a venture by Forte's to create the finest possible menu of traditional English food. The whole place (which older readers will remember as The Hungaria) has been done up to look like an English tavern with staff dressed as Edwardian footmen. The eating here, though authentic, isn't cheap: a variety of genuine potted meats (a rarity these days) cost 12s 6d each; the Cumberland ring sausage is 21s for two. Large and expensive wine list

MIRABELLE, 36 Curzon St, W1 (GRO 4636). Lunch 1-3; dinner 7-11.30. Here you will eat in one of the most famous restaurants in Europe. The cooking is classically perfect, the service excellent, and the wine list almost an encyclopaedia of château-bottled clarets. (Where else in Britain will you be offered an 1832 Ch. Lafite, or an Imperial of 1899 Ch. Haut Brion for £387?) There is a minimum charge of 25s for lunch and 30s for dinner, but if you find you have spent more than £12 on a dinner for two, then don't blame me

PARKES, 4 Beauchamp Pl, SW 3 (KEN 1390). Tom Benson, J L Chamberlain, Beecher Moore. Dinner only 7.30-11.30. C.S. Many people think this is the finest restaurant in London. It certainly takes a lot of beating and I wouldn't like to be asked to name its nearest rival. Tom Benson took over as chef when Ray Parkes died, and has carried on the restaurant's tradition with exceptional originality and distinction. You pay £3 for a four-course table d'hôte meal which may include sweetbreads with cognac, mussels in a mustard soup, baby turkey with cherries and chestnuts, a salad with Roquefort paté, and finish with a peach filled with lemon sorbet. The service is good, the wine list small and rather dear. You will certainly have a memorable meal

You must book well in advance

LES PIES QUI RIENT, Abingdon Rd, W 8 (WES 3737-8). Willoughby's Kensington Restaurant, Ltd. Dinner 7.30-1. Almost a tentative entry to this column, for though the magpies may laugh you won't at the bill when it comes, and the restaurant can be variable in its quality. Never mind, when it is good there are smiles all round for such dishes as Greek fish soup and stuffed vegetables for starters, poulet Meurice, red mullet, or the poulet vallée d'Auge for the main course, and orange with sultana sauce for sweet. Main dishes cost about 17s 6d or so. Masterly wine list, moderate in size and price. Guitarists

SAVOY HOTEL, Strand & Victoria Embankment, WC 2 (TEM 4343). Restaurant manager: Mr Antonio. Meals served until 3 a.m. in Restaurant; 1 a.m. in Grill Room. Internationally famous, with an international menu, impeccable service and international prices—no list of top London restaurants would be complete without the Savoy. There are tables d'hôte (about 30s for lunch, 50s for dinner) in the restaurant; the Grill Room is all à la carte with main dishes not often below, and quite often above, 20s. Wines happily less dear; carafes under £1; Ch. d'Yquem by the glass 7s 6d

SCOTT'S, 18-20 Coventry St, W1 (GER 7175). Manager: Mr E W Jordan. Dinner 6-11. Some people think Scott's is an anachronism with its gilt, mirrors and coat hooks. Whatever anachronisms there may be they aren't the prices on the menu and wine list. The fish dishes are probably best (the meats should not be ignored); lobster bisque (7s 6d), sole à la Scotts (17s 6d) and lobster Thermidor (30s). Lime sorbet (3s 6d) and the crêpe suzette (9s 6d) are good for afterwards. Wines from 20s

TRAFALGAR TAVERN, Park Row, Greenwich, SE10 (GRE 2437). Manager: Lauren Salerno. Dinner 7-11. This house, near the Royal Naval College, right on the edge of the river, has been newly restored at great expense and has a suitably naval decor. The bars are named after famous admirals; it has all been done rather well. Decor has to be paid for, so that the food, whilst very good, is not cheap. Oeufs Bénédicte (8s 6d), white-bait (7s 6d), kidneys in red wine (16s 6d), tournedos Hélène &c.; vegetables are extra. Wines served in silver goblets. Early days yet, the Trafalgar only opened last July, I hope it keeps its promise

THE WHITE HOUSE, Albany St, NW1 (EUS 1200). Manager: Lino Armani. Dinner 6.30-11. C.S. Oddenino's are making something good, but expensive, out of this restaurant set below the big, slightly yellowed, White House flats. Try the quenelles of sole (10s 6d), chicken André Simon (24s), filet de boeuf Lucullus (10s for 4 persons) or the sardines in mint, for a miserly 10s 6d. It isn't absolutely necessary to spend so much, but probably gastronomically more enjoyable. Large wine list to suit most tastes and purses

Who goes to the BURFORD BRIDGE HOTEL Box Hill on Saturdays?

EVERYONE—IT'S THE PLACE

There's a dinner and dance in the 17th Century Tithe Barn every Saturday night. Two bands keep the party going from 8.00 p.m. to 1.00 a.m. and such stars as Lance Percival, Dick Emery and Jon Pertwee appear in the Cabaret. Only 40 minutes from town—and the price is 2 gns including the four-course dinner.

If you want to make a weekend of it you can arrive Saturday afternoon, go to the dinner dance in the evening, stay the night, enjoy a blissful breakfast in bed on Sunday morning and lunch at the hotel—all for 5 gns.

Or take advantage of our voucher scheme which enables you to lunch at any Trust House Hotel on your way home. Telephone: Dorking 4561 to make your reservation.

Did you know that Air-India flies to New York every single day?

AIR-INDIA

A Boeing a day to the U.S.A.

One of Air India's hostesses on their transatlantic Boeings. Her pose: the traditional Indian welcoming gesture "namaste".

What do its dozens of details add up to? Answer: sum car!

TRIUMPH 1300

Britain's best-equipped car next to the big ones!

COMPLETE: that's the word for the new Triumph 1300—one word to cover dozens and dozens of important details. Those details go far beyond what other cars would call extras, for they have been planned into the car. They aren't embellishments, they're basic anatomy. The Triumph 1300 is Britain's best-equipped medium-size car: complete for performance, safety, comfort, convenience. Read on for an (incomplete) account of it.

Complete for performance

Front-wheel drive The 1296 cc engine (located fore-and-aft) is a developed version of the Herald engine, therefore tried and tested. The integral power and transmission unit is mounted over the line of the front wheels—which is good for cornering. And so is the all-wheel independent suspension.

All-synco gearbox The four forward gears are all on synchromesh. The gear-shift operates direct to the gearbox without intermediate linkage: result, very crisp gearchange.

Small turning circle 30 feet only. Smaller than on any British front-wheel-drive car, smaller than on most cars of any kind. 'No loss' cooling system You top up the radiator water very, very rarely because of this ingenious system invented by the Leyland Motor Corporation.

Complete for safety

Disc brakes Standard equipment on front wheels.

Light dimmers Facia light can be turned up or down, so you're not dazzled. The driver behind you isn't dazzled either, because brake lights and wipers are automatically dimmed at night.

'Impact-break' steering column This explains itself. Childproof locks and safety-belt anchor points for four people explain themselves.

Recessed handles Door-openers and window-winders are entirely get-at-able but safely recessed inside the upholstery of the doors.

Complete for comfort

Heating and full-flow ventilation system You get real ventilation (i.e., outflow as well as inflow) with the windows tight shut. A specially-designed system (with temperature control and a two-speed fan) circulates fresh air up, round and out at the back where it demists the rear window.

Adjustable steering wheel, seats The steering wheel is easily adjustable for rake and length from the driver's position and, in addition, fore, aft, rake and height adjustment provides 81 possible positions for the driver's seat. The front passenger seat is also adjustable fore-and-aft.

Ventilated upholstery The expanded PVC is perforated, to keep you cool. And with the comfort comes downright luxury. Carpets not just fitted, but moulded to the floor shape. Lushly padded seats. And where it's wood, it's real walnut veneer.

Complete for convenience

All-systems-go dial All warning lights are grouped into one dial, like a cake sliced eight ways. And this is what the lights give warning of:

- 1 Ignition on
- 2 Fuel low
- 3 Right winker on
- 4 Handbrake on
- 5 Choke out
- 6 Left winker on
- 7 Oil pressure low
- 8 Headlights undipped

No-change lubrication Gearbox and final drive are lubricated for life, never need draining—only occasional toppings up. There are separate lubrication systems for engine, gearbox and final drive.

11 $\frac{3}{4}$ -gallon tank—biggest tank for any British car under 1800 cc!

Tested — by the public

Over the next few weeks, Triumph 1300 production models will be driven by motorists who have been selected from all sections of the general public. This will give Standard-Triumph invaluable data on the car in everyday use, and supplement the massive testing already carried out by engineers. The car will then be available throughout Britain on January 5th.

See the Triumph 1300 at the Motor Show

It is the star attraction of the Standard-Triumph stand. And that's saying something, because around it are such brilliant cars as the Heralds, Vitesse, Triumph 2000, TR4A and the Spitfire Mk. II. See them all!

25th/29th Oct

Caroline Mortimer, who is 23, makes her first major stage appearance in Roger Longrigg's new play The Platinum Cat, which opens in Brighton on 25 October, and comes to London in the middle of next month. She plays the part of the script-writer of a successful cartoon strip Pudding the Cat. Her co-star is Kenneth Williams

She began her career at 15 as an understudy in her step-father John Mortimer's play What Shall We Tell Caroline? Her mother is novelist Penelope Mortimer. She says that having famous parents helps you to meet people, but that she gets a bit tired of people saying: "Dear little Carrie, isn't she sweet". Determined not to be sweet, she spent two years at RADA, toured in flops, worked in repertory, understudied and made occasional films. She has acted in 13 television plays. "No, I wouldn't like my step-father to write a play for me. People would only say I got the part because of him". Last year she appeared in Don't Let Summer Come at the Mermaid Theatre during the course of which she stripped. She received abusive letters. Her clothes in The Platinum Cat have been designed by June Elson. She is wearing a scarlet and black housecoat, split skirt, feathers round the collar and cuffs. "And that's the least of it", says Miss Mortimer, who has now commissioned her to design a complete wardrobe

So this is concrete poetry

The first comprehensive exhibition in London of concrete poetry, organised by Jasia Reichardt, opens at the Institute of Contemporary Arts this weekend. The art, if not the name, is almost as old as printing itself.

Ran Berlin
in diesem Land forschin
Sich mit vielen Dingen
Höher als vorher? (Schönheit?)
Es so sagt man, wie von seinem Nam' Dirat, Doch Sie sich auch so hoch erheben will,
Als Cypriden überlegen
Bücher, so gut Sie sich mögen.

So, kienel der Bären Bild (Zügel ihren Wappen Schild, Nicht ein Zeichen, das zugleich) Auf der Ecken in dem Reich
Nach viel hoch und große Zügel, Häuser führen,
Ward die Gleichheit auch dem Wären viel gebühren.
Wie sich selbst Kraft über andre viel gebühren.
Doch das höchste Kind von diesen Wären erhebt,
Wie der Bär auch gut auf seinen Klauen bebt,
Da viel andre Tiere nicht brauchen müssen,
Wie er seine Brüll erschallt,
Wann er wie die Menschen steht,
So hebt sich Berlin empor
Unter aller Städte Chor.
Wie nun jeder Stand der Stadt
Theil an diesem Wären hat,
Wider nicht ein einzig Bild
Dine fände Herren juch,
Es verbleibt das eine Bild
Welches als ein velle Bild
Den Körper richtig trägt,
Wann er den Gang so regt,
Dem Lehrer Stand,
Dessen Knie
Spät und früh
durch den Sand
Ohn Verdruss
Waden muß,
Auch damit
Seinen Krin,
Oh er meint,
An den Füßen
Bleiben müssen.

The Bear (above), a poem eulogising Berlin (whose emblem is the bear), was composed by Johann Leonhard Frisch around the year 1700.

We lived beneath the mat,
Warm and snug and fat,
But one woe, and that Was the Cat!

To our joys a clog, In our eyes a fog, On our hearts a log,
Was the Dog!

When the Cat's away,
Then
The mice will play,
But alas!
one day, (So they say)

Came the Dog and Cat, hunting for a Rat,
Crushed
the mice
all flat,
Each one as he sat,
Underneath the mat, (So they say)

A century and a half later, Lewis Carroll designed The Mouse's Tale in Alice (above) to amuse a small girl. Since then, the form has developed both as a witty method of stressing the subject-matter of the words—as in Apollinaire's famous "calligramme" Il Pleut, in which the lines slant obliquely across the page like rainfall —and as a purely abstract composition, like Man Ray's non-poem Lautgedicht (above).

The term "concrete poetry" began to be used in the early 1950s, first in Brazil, then in Germany. There is now a flourishing movement. In Britain, it is centred in Gloucestershire, where the 41-year-old monk Dom Sylvester Houédard produces tiny, delicate typewritten ideograms (above) in his cell at Prinknash Abbey, and Scotland, where Ian Hamilton Finlay is industriously turning his house into "an environmental poem" with letter-covered walls and "poetry ponds" full of stone letters. It can't be long before the movement, which nowadays tends to think big, goes in for advertisement hoardings, the concrete poet's ultimate plaything. Indeed, the ICA exhibition includes a design by Hamilton (who is said to suffer from agoraphobia) for a three-sided fence intended to be erected around a triangle of grass and to bear the Delphic legend: "Little fields long for horizons, Horizons long for little fields."

The jargon of the movement abounds in terms like "opto-phonetic," but one of the less opaque explanations comes from Claus Bremer, a theatrical director as well as a concrete poet, who says: "My work in the theatre is aimed to produce an active and creative co-operation of actors and audience. In writing visual poems, I am attempting to make the reader co-author. The visual organisation of my poems allows for an examination of the meaning of words and letters. Words and letters become visually significant."

Certainly in most concrete poetry, the letters take on a strange life of their own: sinister, as in H N Werkman's gaunt Leninist monoliths (above) and in John Furnival's Tower of Babel (example above) series, or frivolous, as in Edwin Morgan's French Persian Cats Having A Ball (below).

The exhibition even has a poetry machine designed by a German, Eugene Gomringer, in which concentric rings of letters whirl round a spindle. Keat's Ode To A Nightingale hasn't dropped out of it yet, but after half an hour at the ICA nothing much would surprise you. @@@@@@@@@@

A reader of London Life received an effusive circular letter from Liberty's the other morning advertising what are described as car-coats. It began: "Mobile Sir, Rumour has it that you are no mean driver, not just technically qualified to make the thing go but armed with an instinct, a sort of sixth sense, a . . . Please, don't protest. It's exactly that flair, judgement, call it what you will, that we want to alert"

He had just failed his driving test for the second time

Short and shocking

Violetta Leduc, whose autobiography La Batarde is published here on Thursday by Peter Owen, lived for 20 years on an allowance of £5 a week from her Paris publisher, Gallimard, eked out with occasional help from Jean-Paul Sartre and Simone de Beauvoir. Her books, with such grimly uncompromising titles as Ravages, Suffocation and Starvation, sold few copies. La Batarde, a long, clinically detailed story of promiscuity, Lesbianism, crime and hysteria, has sold about 140,000 copies in France, bringing her between £20,000 and £30,000. For 468 pages, she prods and sniffs her way through her memories of a bewildering variety of emotional experiences. She is 57, looks if anything older. "I don't understand why my previous books failed," she says. "I have always written about my life, about me. Nothing is different here." Her next book, La Femme au Petit Renard, is due out in Paris in a few days. It will be short and shocking

Charlton Heston as Michelangelo

"I received a call from a producer at one of the Hollywood studios near my house. I went out and had lunch with him and he said, 'We want to make a motion picture based on the life of Leonardo da Vinci because he was the greatest artist of all time'. I told him he was mistaken, that it was Michelangelo. He replied, 'Now Irving, are you serious?' So I went home and, in the evenings and in my spare time, I dug back into the glorious Italian Renaissance, and the more I read about Michelangelo Buonarroti, the more I was convinced".—Irving Stone

"Irving Stone comes closer to the true spirit of Michelangelo than any other writer".—Bernard Berenson aged 94

"and short must be the time ere even his patience cease. Nay let him come no more to raise the fees of this foul sacrilege beyond report".—Michelangelo

Charlton Heston plays Michelangelo in the film of Irving Stone's novel, The Agony and the Ecstasy, directed by Carol Reed. The film opens at the Astoria, Charing Cross Road, on 27 October

Anna Neagle plans a singing-dancing return to the London stage with guitar-playing pop singer Joe Brown as co-star (above). The show, Charlie Girl, opens at the Adelphi on 15 December

Miss Neagle plays an ex-Cochran young lady who, after marrying 'into the aristocracy, is left a widow with a stately home and three unmarried daughters on her hands. "I'm a sort of female Duke of Bedford", she explains. "It's Longleat, Woburn and Beaulieu all rolled into one"

Joe Brown is the general factotum who organizes everything. He's also in love with Charlie Girl, the youngest daughter

A threat to Bond ...from Smersh?

It is difficult to decide which of the current takeover bids for James Bond would appeal to him least: to be condemned by Mr. Kingsley Amis to chatting up the birds in some provincial Wimpy Bar or to be exiled to the rigours of Eastern Europe by Bulgaria's most popular writer of spy stories, Andrei Guliashky, who is planning to cast Bond as a Western enemy of the peace in his next novel.

Spy fiction, like science fiction, has recently become politically respectable in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe. In Warsaw, they queue before dawn on the publication day of a new spy novel. In Prague, the Czech Army's own publishing house is churning out titles for an enthusiastic public. In Moscow, there are first print orders of up to 200,000 copies for new spy novels by Vadim Kozhevnikov and Juri German.

But if the symptoms of Bond-fever are similar, the tone of the stories themselves is closer to Ambler than Fleming. The following rough analysis of a typical people's hero is based on Guliashky's descriptions of his spy-catcher Avakum Zakhof, in the novels The Mystery of the Zmeitzza, Rakif Calling Dayud and The Sleeping Beauty

	BOND, James	ZAKHOF, Avakum
Age:	Mid thirties	Early forties
Character:	Sensual, hedonistic. Brave but bloody-minded	The intellectual type. Brave too, but Socialist nobility of spirit sometimes cramps his style when the other man is down
Morality:	"A bit of a bastard"	U-Certificate. (He once fed a suspect ballerina drugged coffee on her own divan, searched the flat for evidence and then walked home in the rain)
Men Friends:	None	Hordes, mostly healthy outdoor types—civil engineers, agronomists and so on
Clothes:	Savile Row. Dislikes buttons and laces, likes short-sleeved shirts	Suits as near Savile Row as currency regulations allow. Wears white shirts with starched collars and cuffs: "He never goes out in shirt-sleeves, even in midsummer" Sometimes sports a black, wide-brimmed hat
Food:	A great gourmet, rarely caught with the same menu twice, except perhaps for lobster	Frequently found sitting down to "a veal cutlet and red wine"; favourite dish: "noodles with cabbage and plenty of pepper"
Drink:	Dom Perignon champagne and vodka martinis preferred	"Has little taste for alcohol" Has been known to take brandy sometimes in his tea
Smoking:	Custom-made cigarettes	Pipe most of the time
Reading:	Books on golf	Enjoys curling up with a good treatise on archaeology
Recreations:	Great swimmer, fond of golf, passion for gambling	Knowledgeable balletomane, also enjoys an evening spent "with a tough algebraic problem". Favourite relaxation: a good long walk
Habitat:	Anywhere the sun shines	Socialist security agents never indulge in anything other than "protecting the homeland against foreign agents". This condemns him to squelching about the rain-soaked Bulgarian countryside.
Dangers Encountered:	They include, being shot at, poisoned, cut up with lethal bowler hats, drugged, bombed and laser-beamed	With all that rain, one of these books, he's going to catch a nasty cold in the head
Subordinate to:	"M" the mysterious. "Head of Security"	"Colonel Manov". Also "Head of Security". Same initial. Makes you wonder

All the villains in the James Bond stories have some distinguishing mark that sets them apart from normal men. The latest, in Thunderball, is one-eyed Sicilian millionaire Emilio Largo, played by Adolfo Celi

PROPERTY REVIEW: WHAT IS A WATES?

Until quite recently, if you said of someone that he lived on an estate you would have implied that he owned hundreds or thousands of acres, that everybody else who lived on those acres was under his employment, and that he saw no-one he did not wish to. Since the war, though, the word estate has come to imply an almost exactly opposite way of life. It conjures up a vision of an area in which are paraded hundreds of houses, identical or very similar to each other, mass-built by the same company, and lived in by community-minded people with similar outlook.

The new kind of estate living has its advantages; one is that the standard of building, finish and equipment is likely to be higher than if the same amount of money had been spent on building one individual house. Another is the amenities—many estates include shopping centres and communal gardens. Its disadvantages are almost entirely those of taste and inclination; it is virtually impossible, should you want to, to stamp your own individuality on an estate house. Every inch has been planned for a definite purpose, and should you have a wild fancy to change a bedroom into a living room, you would have to repress it—the house simply wouldn't work that way. Most estates have rules ensuring the outside of the house will stay the same, part of a theme rather than a personality projection of the householder.

Specification

The house illustrated on these pages is part of a Wates Estate. It costs £7,750 for a 99-year lease and is built on the site of the old Hurst Park Racecourse and car park. It has three bedrooms, the largest 14 ft. by 9 ft. 10 in., a sitting room 18 ft. by 16 ft. 6 in., which is connected to the dining room 9 ft. by 8 ft. 6 in., which is connected to the kitchen. These three rooms take up the entire first floor. It also has a bathroom, a garden room, a utility room, and a downstairs cloakroom.

Its garage has a door into the hall and its dustbin is politely tucked away beside the front door. It looks on to the Thames and has, at the back, a balcony to look on to the Thames from. It is easily run and maintained, with plastic gutters and outside pipes that don't rust or need painting... ducted warm-air central heating powered by gas... a waste-disposal unit and a built-in refrigerator... a pale primrose bathroom equipped down to a looking-glass and a radiant wall-heater. It was designed by Wates' own architects' department: Chief architect K W Bland, ARIBA; executive architect C R Vass, ARIBA, Dip TP (Lon).

Decorating

If you buy this house you will be able to choose your wall-papers, included in the purchase price so long as they don't cost more than around 10s a roll. You can choose the colour of your inside paintwork, too—once the choice of colours was limited, but since Wates discovered that most people choose the same colour anyway the embargo was lifted. Your outside paintwork must be white and that's how Wates householders like it—recently one man painted his windows yellow and the estate office had six complaints the next morning.

Inhabitants

People who live in Wates houses are likely to be between 25 and 45, with two or three children. On this house they will pay the Esher Urban District Council rates at 9s 8d in the pound, on an estimated rateable value of £154. They will also pay an annual ground rent; £35 rising to £52 10s after 33 years and £70 after 66 years. (It's not all that likely they'll be there after 33 years, though; many Wates buyers are what are described as Rising Young Executives who tend to move round the country as they change their job).

They are more than likely to be on the telephone—the GPO anticipates 90 per cent telephone coverage on a Wates estate. The Wates wife will work in a kitchen on the first floor, designed so that she can look out and see community life going on round her and not feel isolated. Soon she will be able to shop on the estate, and her husband will be able to fill up the car at a petrol pump and have a drink at the pub, both part of the amenities.

Travel

The Wates husband is likely to be a London-Commuter; if he is, he will catch his train from Hampton Court Station, and his monthly Season ticket to Waterloo will currently cost him £5 19s.

Rules

When you contract to buy a

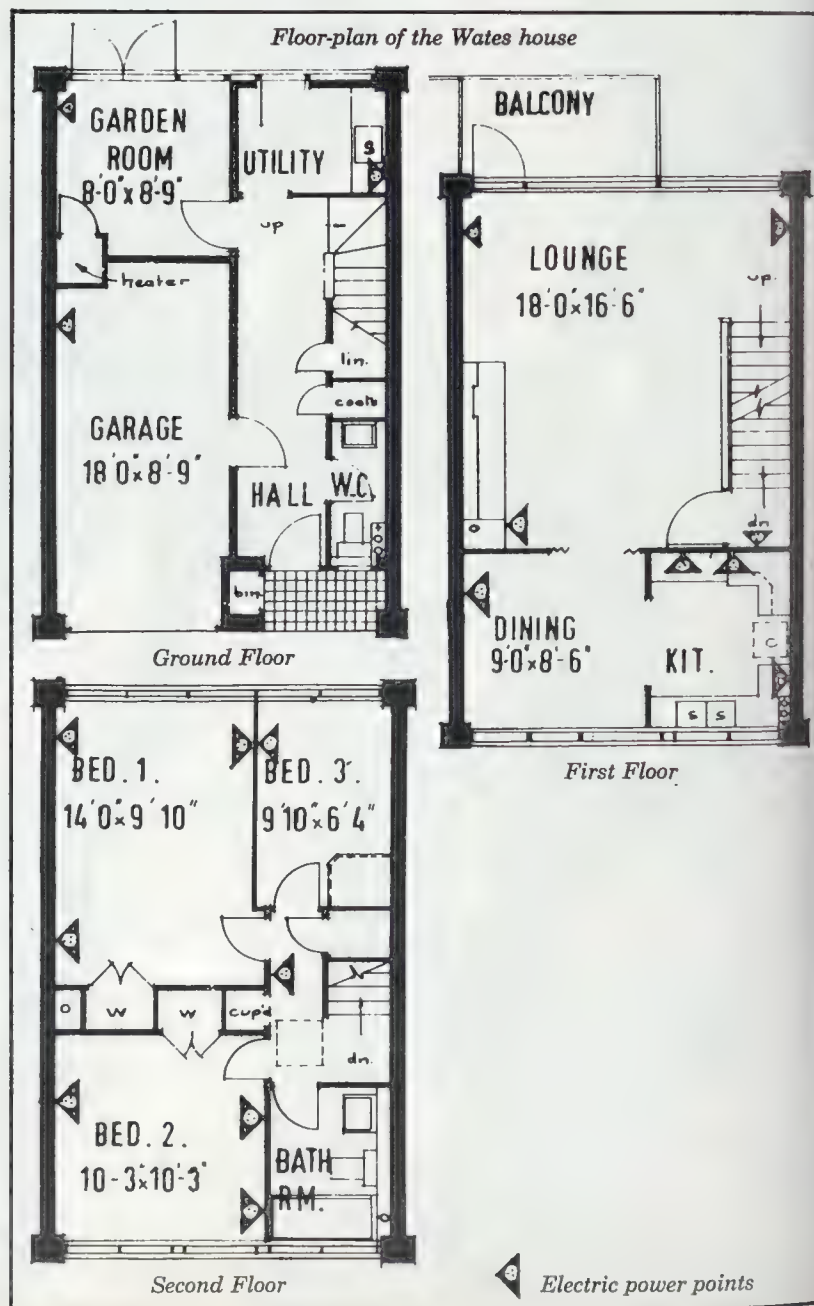

Wates house, you also contract to stick to a set of rules. Wates wives, for instance, may only hang out washing on any two days a week, on Monday to Friday up to 5 p.m., on Saturday up to midday. This rule reminds me irresistibly of the sort of thing one used to find pinned up on the school notice board: Juniors are reminded that they are not allowed to walk in the lower rose garden during luncheon break; but Wates point out that this is designed purely to Preserve the Amenities; if women were allowed to hang out washing whenever the mood took them, apparently, the place would be one continual mad flutter of sheets.

Another rule designed to preserve the amenities is one which asks householders to join a management company, paying £1 for an A share, and up to £10 a year contribution towards company expenses. The company is responsible for keeping the common gardens and paths in good condition.

Opinion

This house is as hygienic as a packet of frozen food, as space-saving as a filing cabinet. It has none of the perverse disadvantages of an old great-grandmother of a house, but none of the lop-sided charm either. As in most houses that are designed to use every inch, there is no room for untidiness, no alcoves or odd corners where you can chuck Wellington boots, old cardboard boxes and the puppy. The fitted cupboards are I think rather small; the one in the master bedroom could accommodate master's clothes, certainly, but mistress might well have to look elsewhere for hangingspace. Ideally this house would be lived in by a tidy couple, young and on the move and community-minded, with two tidy children.

1 Bathroom is grey and yellow, has a wall-point for razors, a radiant wall heater. It's even got a looking glass

2 Kitchen has Marley tiles, Californian units by Wrighton, built-in refrigerator and waste-disposal unit

3 Front view—anthracite grey weather-boarding, pale turquoise slide-up garage door

4 First floor sitting room has glass-panelled stairs, connects through to dining room and kitchen

5 Rear view from the terrace—the Thames at Hurst Park

Emmanuel Ungaro: Couturier

UNGARO: tomorrow's man

By Peggy Roche

Reversible, button-on tunic-coat in two-toned gaberdine has an optional button-on cape, matching helmet. It is worn over a plain woollen dress.

Evening tunic in silk velvet, caught with a bow, over very slightly longer Bermudas.

Deceptive, skimming, two-panel dress in wool gaberdine. The back is plain.

Emmanuel Ungaro is the most unconventional couturier in the business. The basis of his collection is the concept of clothes built round a woman not to imprison her but to give her freedom, to make her conscious of her body as if her clothes were a second skin. He has no specific type of woman in mind, but he likes women to look contemporary, to be able to move naturally, unhindered by convention. His colours are strong, but never aggressive; there is no reason why a woman should wear dark colours in winter. Everything is supple, close-fitting, perfectly shaped in heavy materials like woollen gaberdine. He cuts all his clothes personally. Instead of boots, he completes his line with longer, removable gaiters, making short dresses more wearable. They are worn over flat, square-heeled and square-toed shoes. For his next collection he will again use heavy materials, and he is sure to translate his day clothes into evening styles. His current collection can be seen at 6 bis Avenue Macmahon, Paris 7—between 3 and 4 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and over here Fortnum and Mason have bought and copied the original of one of his suits. Patterns of Ungaro styles have been bought by Wallis Shops, Reginald Bernstein, Mornessa and Fortnum and Mason.

WHICH CAR LEADS?

Inquiry conducted by an anonymous motoring correspondent

Before 1914 the World's Best Car was unquestionably the Rolls-Royce Silver Ghost, though closely hounded by the Noiseless Napier. But after the Armistice a legion of fresh luxury cars appeared and the Rolls-Royce reputation was challenged by Lanchester, Leyland Eight, Hispano-Suiza, Ensign, Farman, Sheffield-Simplex and others. Not all survived; over-optimism on the part of some post-war firms, a world slump, and a series of successful Phantoms left Rolls-Royce unrivalled, except perhaps by the lordly Hispano-Suiza V12. Has the position changed since the Second World War? Which country today makes the most desirable car money can buy?

The Best need not necessarily corner like an Elan, be as fast as a Ferrari or an E-type. But it must be supremely comfortable, noiseless, with the pace and acceleration of the average-quick sports car and an interior as luxurious as the best London club.

For some years now the Rolls-Royce has not fully matched up to these ideals. The Silver Cloud III was quick, but it was not the quickest of imposing luxury saloons. It cornered fast, but flabbily. Its light-alloy V8 engine made its presence felt and heard when idling—just a whisper and a tremor, but it was there. The American-crib automatic transmission could kick quite viciously at times and the ride was not as smooth as it should have been. Otherwise, the car was near perfection, as well it might be at a price, in standard steel saloon form, of £5,632. Daimler contrived to sell their smaller-capacity but faster Majestic Major for a mere £2,703. Its 4½-litre V8 engine, evolved by racing motorcycle designer Edward Turner, was smooth and quiet and the car, despite its size, had the balance of a GT machine on corners.

Mercedes-Benz had specialized since the war in advanced saloon models with fuel-injection engines, independent suspension at front and rear, and disc brakes. Their 300SE, which sold in England for £4,088 in automatic transmission form, was delightful to drive, and a very fast, safe car. Rolls-Royce might still devote more care than any other maker in putting their cars together, soldering up the classic radiator shell in cloistered isolation (it costs £130 more than the Bentley radiator) and going to extreme pains to ensure that the veneers in the coachwork matched each other. But on the road, particularly up and down Alps and along the autostrada, the Magic Name was being left behind.

The Best Car stakes lie today between Britain and Germany. Though Italy has Ferrari and Maserati, their appeal is speed, performance and handling finesse, delivered with a snarl and a roar. France no longer builds fine cars though more years ago than it is decent to document, Citroën introduced the highly advanced Goddess, with self-levelling, variable height hydro-pneumatic suspension, pre-selected power gear change, in-board disc front brakes, detachable body panels for ease of repair (since copied by Rover for their 2000), safety one-spoke steering wheel, front-wheel-drive and a functional body shape equipped with generous, comfortable seats, efficient ventilation and thick carpets. You can buy it here for £1,977 in the new Pallas form. But even with its smooth over-square five-bearing engine, self-levelling headlamps (which must be among the best gimmicks at the Motor Show) and quartz-iodine auxiliary lamps as well, the Citroën still isn't quite quiet enough, big enough, is too commonplace by reason of its sheer merit, to compete with The Best.

Sweden makes motor cars most conscientiously but the Volvo rates only as a durable, rugged family car. Japan is striving for markets where quantity is more vital than quality; the Russians and the Czechs are ten years behind the rest. America has the biggest, bounciest, most capacious cars of all. They are quieter than the finest from Europe, about as quick, and possess impeccably silken two-pedal transmissions. Drool if you will about the Cadillac Fleetwood (£4,313 from General Motors' in London) or the Lincoln Continental (which would set you back £4,726); but try to stop one from 100 mph or wind one round a Welsh mountain road and you will return to European thinking in a hurry.

So the issue lies between Rolls-Royce and Mercedes-Benz. But what are the facts? The old Silver Cloud had lost much of its silver lining. S H Grylls of Rolls-Royce, who engineered it, excused its old-fashioned rigid back axle on cart-springs by saying that every system of independent rear suspension with which R-R had experimented either allowed too much noise to be transmitted to the car's interior or couldn't be effectively located. Grylls discounted fuel-injection as noisy and presenting warming-up problems. He went to some pains to explain that disc brakes might squeak under dusty conditions, and squeak a Rolls-Royce must not, so he preferred drums. Also the gearbox-driven mechanical servo (adopted by R-R in 1925, after Renault, Hispano-Suiza, Delage, Sunbeam and others had used it for years) was, in Grylls's opinion, superior to a proprietary vacuum brake servo, with which other designers were entirely satisfied.

Thus the Chief Engineer of the Rolls-Royce Motor Car Division defended his gilded creation. Meanwhile Rudi Uhlenhaut, of Daimler-Benz of Stuttgart, the brilliant engineer responsible for the racing Mercedes cars that dominated the circuits of the world just

The chart opposite is a London Life guide to car buying. It shows the consumer categories by age and salary in which we think manufacturers market their cars.

We have assumed that each manufacturer anticipates a majority of his sales for each model from specific types of consumer—with the exception of the bulk, mass market of the 35-54 age groups, and the £1300-£2000 salary groups: in these groups the markets overlap.

The emphasis is on the majority of sales within each category; there is no attempt to be exclusive, and there will always be exceptions.

Some manufacturers will not agree with these assumptions. BMC, for instance, denies that any market research figures exist. They "are more concerned with technical innovation than market research" and are busy and happy as long as "a Mini goes to everyone from a duke to a dustman". We have put the Mini in every category.

Sources were sales profiles, statements about advertising policy and statements about which models a manufacturer considers his competitors in each class. In the cases where a manufacturer claimed to have no marketing policy, no relevant advertising information, and no competitors, we placed the cars where we thought most suitable.

We were helped particularly by the Ford Motor Company with highly developed marketing information about their cars.

Other information:

1,175,000 new cars were sold in this country in 1964

Shares of total production, including exports, among seven manufacturers were as follows:

BMC 37%

Ford 28%

Vauxhall 13%

Rootes 12%

Standard Triumph 7%

Jaguar and Rover 3%

Less than 20% of new cars sold cost over £1000

Less than 15% of new cars sold are bought by or for the principal use of women.

50% of cars sold are to the 35-54 age group

"Brand loyalty" among the Big Four is as follows:

63% of first time BMC buyers buy BMC the second time.

59% of first time Ford buyers buy Ford the second time.

55% of first time Vauxhall buyers buy Vauxhall the second time.

46% of first time Rootes buyers buy Rootes the second time.

before the war and again in 1955, had been busy on a big Mercedes-Benz. Nearly always the German company has had a Grosser model in its catalogue and the 600 is a massively Teutonic-looking motor car, that is also the last word in technical development and luxury travel. The 600 uses a 6.3-litre overhead camshaft V8 engine putting out 300 horsepower at 4,100 rpm. This propels the three-ton 600 at any speed from a hushed crawl to two miles a minute. It will actually go a bit faster. Uhlenhaut's car is controlled by one of the world's best power steering gears, has independent self-levelling suspension with ride control, and power-control of seat adjustment, window lifts, sliding roof. Even the door locks are actuated by a central hydraulic system. The car runs on 9.00 x 15 tyres, of which only Fulda and Continental make covers that will stand up to this weighty Mercedes when cruising at well over the ton in ghostly silence along the autobahnen.

But big and impressive as it is, Uhlenhaut delights in slinging the 600 round a road circuit faster than drivers of the Moss calibre can handle a sports car. Made as a saloon, and as a Pullman limousine for State occasions, there is nothing freakish about the biggest Mercedes-Benz. You can go along to British Mercedes-Benz at Brentford and collect one for £8,926. In Germany the 600 costs under £5,000, thus rivaling R-R price-wise. Though a production of over 300 in the first year may not have made a profit on what was, anyway, a prestige bid, the Daimler-Benz Herr Directors are probably as surprised as their salesmen that the demand for these 600s is now running at around 50 a month.

This German with the racing pedigree must have made R-R think fast and furiously, for Crewe has come up with a new model, the Silver Shadow that is collecting crowds around the R-R stand at the Earls Court Show. Rarely has a Chief Engineer more thoroughly revised his thinking. For Grylls has endowed this latest Rolls-Royce with self-levelling, all independent suspension, disc brakes, a power braking system and re-styled bodywork, though the traditional radiator is retained. He claims that the kick of the old suspension and the jerk of the Silver Cloud's transmission have been eradicated.

Grylls spent some ten years perfecting the successors to the Rolls-Royce Silver Clouds and S-Series Bentleys—the 1966 Silver Shadow and the T-Series, often test-driving them himself. This practical approach to problems takes him some 20,000 motoring miles every year and is reflected in the technical development of the Silver Shadow. Deciding on independently sprung back wheels for the new Rolls-Royce, the Chief Engineer set out to solve the problem of road-wheel-noise in the body which this construction involves. Refusing to fit ordinary disc brakes in case they squeaked, Grylls pioneers, in the new Silver Shadow and T-Series Bentley, a soft wire winding on the discs and special brake-pad abutments. "It is mathematically impossible to cure squeaking in drum brakes but it should be theoretically possible to cure squeaking in disc brakes," says Grylls.

He still builds safety-first factors into the cars, like the three independent braking systems, the strong monocoque steel and aluminium body construction, warning lights not only if the brake fluid gets dangerously low but if a stop lamp fails or the radiator level falls. There is dimming of the turn-indicators and stop-lamps when the side-lights are on, crash-padding of the facia rail, a safety steering column. By evolving hydraulic height adjustment, which operates quickly as soon as a door is opened or the gear lever is put into neutral for the passengers to embark, but less quickly on the road so that a normal ride is available round bends and over hump-back bridges, and by fitting the Silver Shadow with brakes energized by hydraulic reservoirs kept charged at 2,500 lb./sq. in. from two engine-driven pumps, Grylls has given the Rolls-Royce points that no other car in the world has in this form.

The new car is five inches lower, three and a half inches narrower and seven inches shorter than its predecessors, yet is roomier and has an enlarged petrol tank (24 gallons). The gear lever of the automatic gearbox, which incorporates a free wheel and clutch to iron out jerkiness, selects the gears by electrical remote control.

The light-alloy 6,230 c.c. V8 engine is retained, but with new cylinder heads and better porting to give more power. Rolls-Royce never disclose the power developed but as an industrial version of this unit, the L841, gives 240 bhp, at 4,250 rpm, it is conceivable that the Silver Shadow pours out at least 250 to 260 bhp.

Grylls has, perhaps reluctantly, discarded the gearbox driven mechanical brake servo which Rolls-Royce adopted for the Silver Ghost in 1925, because the lower frame of the Silver Shadow brings the mechanical linkage too close to the road. In any case the salt used in winter on roads causes corrosion of these mechanical parts. The new power brakes incorporate a 'brain' to give the 'feel' and progressive braking which drivers were used to with the old mechanical servo. Grylls has the clear conscience of an engineer who provides three separate braking systems for those who drive Rolls-Royces and Bentleys should the power system fail.

He also ensures that should the headlamps fail a secondary circuit restores them to the dipped position. Grylls scorns the alternator for battery charging as being too noisy, but ensures that the special Lucas dynamo has a highly adequate charge rate. The Rolls-Royce radiator is retained, but smaller than before and reverting to the old Silver Ghost shape of being broader than it is high. "This is an affair for the stylist—the engineer's job is to cool the engine" says Grylls. Power steering is also retained, lighter, slightly quicker than before.

The design and test programme that began ten years ago has resulted in a truly advanced, superbly silent piece of engineering. The Silver Shadow costs £6,656. Rolls-Royce intend to step up production from around 30 cars a week to 40, and have export orders sufficient to make the company independent of the home market if need be.

Time and many thousands of miles of hard motoring will tell whether or not this new car from the company that built the Merlin engine for the Battle of Britain will qualify Britain for top place in the Best Car honours list. But meanwhile it can be said that Rolls-Royce provide the star attraction at the 1965 Motor Show.

Note: Prices are difficult to standardise. The price of a four door saloon may have been compared to the price of a two door saloon, a soft top with a hard top, a price which includes the price of delivery (Fords) with those that do not. D L = de luxe, S = Super

The face of Alec Issigonis of BMC (left) is well known. But what do the other chief engineers look like? Here are eight of them

William Heynes, Vice Chairman and Director of Engineering of Jaguar Cars. He is 62, was educated at the Warwick School, and served an apprenticeship with Humber. He joined S.S. Cars in 1935 (they became Jaguar Cars in 1946) as chief engineer. He was responsible for the XK 120 in 1949, and for the C and D Type racing cars which were successful at Le Mans for five years

Harold Beach and Tadeusz Marek, Production Engineering Manager and Research and Development Manager of Aston Martin. (If they were one, they would be known as "chief engineer".) Harold Beach (rear) is English, 52, joined Aston Martin in 1950, and has worked on all the David Brown models. Tadeusz Marek (front) Polish-born, is 56, joined Aston Martin in 1951, has worked on the DB3, 4, 5 and 6 models

John Alden, Director and Chief Engineer, Vauxhall Motors. He is 49, was educated at Oxford High School and the Oxford School of Technology. After an apprenticeship with MG, he joined Vauxhall in 1938. He became chief product engineer in 1961, and chief engineer in 1963. He was responsible for the Bedford TK range of trucks, and for the design and development of the Victor 101

Harry Webster, Director and Chief Engineer, Standard Triumph. He is 47, was educated at Welshpool County School and Coventry Technical College, and joined the Standard Motor Company in 1932 at the age of 14. He was made a director in 1957, chief engineer in 1955. He has been responsible for designing and developing the new Triumph 1300

ASTON MARTIN

By Jeanloup Sieff

There are two kinds of automobiles: the first is made to get you from one place to another, the second should be thought of as symbols rather than means of transportation. In this second, happy family survive today only three: the Roll-Royce, the Ferrari and the Aston Martin (right)

The first two, having become status symbols, have lost some of their innate class by the fact that this sort of success has come within the reach of too many people who have bought them, neither loving nor understanding them; these affairs of prince and pauper end up by dethroning the prince rather than ennobling the pauper

One only remains proud and untouched, and it so happens that it's the most beautiful, the raciest, the coldest, the one which frightens the vulgar, the Aston Martin. I willingly believe that an Aston is a technical masterpiece but one doesn't fall in love with a woman by studying X-rays of her chest; one rather contemplates her walking in the street, one touches her, inhales her, tries to subdue her; one is at once her slave, her master, her accomplice. The same holds true for a car, and that is the reason I cannot tell you why I love the Aston Martin; it would be a shameless confession

LOTUS ELAN COUPE

By David Williams

The Lotus Elan (far right) is to me a real joy car, fast in both top speed and acceleration, corners so well that the twiddly bits can be taken unbelievably quickly. An unusual but desirable feature are the headlights which fold down into the bonnet giving a very low front enabling big blokes like me, 5 ft 6 in, to see where they are going

ROLLS-ROYCE

By Terence Donovan
The Rolls (below) I now own is the most economic car I have ever had the good fortune to possess. Its ease of handling, crisp acceleration, its steady, firm anchor-like braking, its sense of motion really only transmitted by instrumentation bring great joy to my heart and eyes. Its total comfort allows its passengers to arrive unshagged by the warbling ultrasonic and sonic whistling common to many contemporary cars. It is indeed bliss to be at the wheel as it glides along the lanes and highways of this island to which I am so passionately addicted. Sad only that the attention to detail, finish and attitude of the car is so rare in these days of what Ken Purdy referred to as jelly-bodied clunkers. Keep Britain green

THE MORON-MADE CITY

"We live in moron-made cities. We wish to see towns and buildings which do not make us feel ashamed, ashamed that we cannot realize the potential of the twentieth century, ashamed that philosophers and physicists must think us fools, and painters think us irrelevant. Our generation must try to produce evidence that men are at work."

This statement of belief and intention was made in 1954 by two young architects, the husband-and-wife partnership of Alison and Peter Smithson, and it echoed the manifestoes of the previous generation's avantgarde while at the same time announcing that a new generation was still not satisfied with such progress as had been made. The Smithsons have acknowledged their debt to the Modern Movement as a whole, to its painters, sculptors, writers, composers, philosophers and scientists: to Picasso, Klee, Mondrian, Brancusi, Joyce, Le Corbusier, Schonberg, Bergson, and Einstein. But they have also pointed out that "Modern Architecture" is now a historical term which describes a certain period in architectural development.

Though the Smithsons came originally from County Durham, they live and work in London.

"The English don't ever seem to have set out to build a city as such," they say, "let alone formed the concept of a city as a work of art, which of course is what we see it as potentially; a collective work of art, that is. And if a city is not a work of art then really it's a nothing, it's just a load of old buildings with cars in between. In Paris it's obvious that they've been building a real urban complex right from the time of Henri IV: if it's a work of art like that, then every little activity there is slots into it, the city being greater than any individual because it is the sum of all individuals. And this fitting together, the uniformity and the quietness and the wonderful blanketing effect of Paris give everyone a great sense of security and a place on a known continuum. You don't have all this jazzing up of shopfronts, or at least it's not ruinous the way it is here: the French just make do and tick over, walk up four floors, and so on. If a city is this kind of work of art you live in, then the living there itself takes on a marvellous sort of extra quality: you are suddenly made aware of very ordinary things like entering or moving or being quiet, things which suddenly become positive and not residual. That's the trouble with Londoners: they see the city merely as a mechanism with which you can tinker to make it all right: they don't see it as a work of art, a live thing, a living organism, which could make life marvellous. You don't have to start building London all over again: this sort of life can be achieved by symbols, just as you can transform an unpleasant room by a pleasant picture in such a way that you really don't see the room at all."

London has few of the best qualities even of other cities in Britain:

"It's just a collection of little villages badly joined together. Liverpool, Manchester and Birmingham were so much more city-minded than London. The Victorian buildings in Cannon Street and places like that in the city are on such a mean scale compared with, say, Manchester. Newcastle has this whole street laid out: all right, so it's jerry-built behind the stone facades, but it represents a state of mind that never existed in London: it's a city idea. An estate like Bloomsbury is all very romantic in its way, but it was relatively loosely slung together by a speculative builder and was certainly not living on the grand European scale. Whereas in Edinburgh, for instance, you have those wonderful Italianate mansions, each with its lawn and [continued overleaf]

holly-bushes: knowledge of how to build a house like that, achieving that gracious sort of living, just didn't exist in London. If you go out to a mid-Victorian suburb like Ealing you find the houses meanly pinched up against one another, and even in places like Sydenham where Ruskin and other people lived who really thought they knew something, you'll find comparatively the same. But a comparable row built for the equivalent class of person in Derby or Nottingham were really respectable houses standing in decent plots of land. Evidently in London they never built to last: that is, they didn't really think about it, they just put them up. But in Edinburgh and Derby and places like that they really thought they were building as in the old times, for ever, the Athens of the North and all that, you find really formal layouts and real Greek Revival ideas in provincial cities: but not in London. There ought logically to be no mental difference between two working builder-architects like Cubitt and Wood of Bath, but Bloomsbury has nothing to compare with the searingly grand ideas of Bath, with the real big gesture of a crescent. And in general the provincial houses are far better built than the London ones of the same period, everything is better made: the door furniture, the hinges, the choice of wood.

"It's something in the London character, the London mentality. If you go to a seaside resort there will be at least one house which someone has gone to enormous trouble to put up: but the equivalent just does not exist in London. Curiously enough, this attitude of mind is a positive advantage in the one feature that is marvellous about London, the number of parks in the central area. What makes them so pleasant is precisely that they're almost anonymous, there's nothing grand or pretentious about them. They're very easy to get on with. But the houses have never had the same sort of ease, that ease you find in Paris and in some provincial cities. The energy was in the North where people built cities as cities and retired to seaside places: they had a definite idea how England should be, how everything should be done, how they wanted their city to be built. When they saw the Industrial Revolution was "their first London building, for the Economist in St James's, took into account, blended with, and even flattered the 18th-century Boodle's Club on an adjacent site" taking and they had the brass and energy to do it, they actually sat down to make their city the Athens of the North. Did anyone ever say that of London? No: they probably thought it was silly to try, even."

The Smithsons see the demolition in 1963 of Philip Hardwick's Arch at Euston Station as a symbol of the jealousy of London, of an unhealthy domination.

"What the hell did they do it for? Who were they? The Euston Arch was a monument to the Railway Age, to an age when for the first time for centuries the power which had traditionally resided in the Court and the South suddenly came to depend on the industrial energy of the North, on men like George Stephenson, born in a cottage at Wylam, near Newcastle, who invented the whole thing from nothing: a man who could survey a line, organize the men, design the track, the engines, the signals, the lamps, name the places, design the lettering, do it all, everything. One envies him his force: no one really has the will to operate on that scale now. These men suddenly were the power: and they put up this monument in London, a simple, marvellous piece of architecture, which just sort of thundered away there, standing for what these men had done. All over London there are monuments to the others which have lasted for centuries, some of them. And since the 1914-18 war the power has come back to the South, largely because all decisions had to be made from one place then, and later London got a stranglehold on the new power communications. And so they seized this opportunity to destroy the Arch, which was a kind of imposition on London, a reminder that what was the Empire was based on men working in the dirt up North. Obviously the Prime Minister didn't refuse to act because he knew this consciously, but surely when he was making up his mind or not making up his mind to save it, he must have felt certain that to knock it down was somehow the right thing to do, as if to wipe out the fact that there was a time when the South wasn't dominant. If it had been a monument to Marlborough or someone like that then they'd have found a reason for keeping it, because he was part of the southern economic power, he came from where the wealth was manipulated.

"This is just a feeling about the whole business, really, and it might not even be true: but it explains it, and nothing else does. All the rational reasons are certainly not true. They say they knocked it down because they're going to build a new railway station there; they're not building a new railway station just there. They said they had to knock it down because the lines had to be longer; the lines have not been made longer. The station is in the same position as it always was. But they've got rid of the Arch, and the Great Hall as well. Why did they take this violent action? Who are they? Just why are they so destructive? It's so difficult to make anything, yet how long did it take to knock that lot down? Six weeks? And the preservation societies are on the skids: once they lost the Euston Arch and then the Coal Exchange it began to look fatally as though they were associated with lost causes. Anyone can pull anything down now: if that Army on Salisbury Plain really decides to hum, they'll have Stonehenge down next. Part of the trouble is that these societies often consist mainly of the people who don't like anything to happen at all, who are opposed to anything new; therefore ordinary people are rightly suspicious of such societies, and just think the members are a lot of old crumbs."

The Smithsons have what amounts to a reverence for anything into which effort and trouble have been put. This shows particularly in the care with which they made sure that their first London building, for the Economist in St. James's, took into account, blended with, and even flattered the 18th-century Boodle's Club on an adjacent site. The Smithsons designed a group of three buildings standing on a plaza to replace the corpus of obsolete Edwardian buildings which had solidly filled the site before. On the St. James's Street side they placed a bank building, conforming in scale and achieving great compatibility with the other buildings on that side of this most conservative of streets; behind this a tower block rises, still conforming in general to the scale of the St. James's area though it is in fact its highest building, which houses the Economist offices; and an exact half-size copy of this tower stands behind Boodle's and contains flats, chambers, and services for the Club. Below the plaza on which these three buildings stand is an underground car park and various services.

The demolition of the building next to Boodle's left a long flank wall of the Club exposed, and it is in the architectural treatment of this that the extreme, almost loving care of the Smithsons' solution to the problems of this site is seen at its most original. They studied Boodle's from what they call an archaeological approach:

"From the bones and other objects an archaeologist finds, he has to comprehend through interpretation the whole culture, what it was, what made it tick, everything he can about it. Similarly, we had to try to think what Boodle's was to its architect, to its time, and then think what it had become, as well."

This examination in depth revealed information that led to the solution, the blending and neutralizing of the lines and proportions of Boodle's with those of the Smithsons' buildings. The feature which most closely links the two is a new three-storey bay window on the exposed wall of the Club, which appears to be constructionally the same as the Economist but which actually parodies its Portland stone facing by being carried out in the modern equivalent of Coade artificial stone, just as the Club imitates in Coade the masonry facings of buildings of its own period: a delightful, if rather recondite, architectural joke.

embody almost didactically the architectural theories of its designers and fit beautifully into its surroundings, but it has also provided improved civic amenities: it is now possible to walk across the plaza, an area bounded on three sides by roads, and quite immune from traffic; it is also possible to stop and rest there on seats. Compared with what was there before, the Smithsons have added light, air, space and public amenity besides providing better accommodation for a bank, offices, and Boodle's Club. This is in marked contrast to most developments, which live off built capital and close in every available site rather than attempt to add new values.

The Economist is a magnificent example of what can be done in urban renewal, a practical, successful demonstration of how to preserve the better buildings by re-stating them in terms of relationships with new buildings. It has obvious applications to St. James's Street itself: the whole of the east side could be developed organically in this manner, and once, as something of an architects' office joke, the Smithsons imposed on an air photo of the whole St. James's area photographs of the model of the Economist on half a dozen other sites: it worked well. Such a redevelopment would make the area architecturally as aristocratic as it likes to think it is historically.

Office joke: an air photo of the St. James's area on which the Smithsons have imposed models of their Economist building all over the place

But even the redevelopment of St. James's would solve only a small part of London's problem.

"At the moment they're trying to do something to alleviate the conditions of traffic congestion which already exist, making huge investments at places like Hyde Park Corner which serve only to attract more traffic to them and make conditions worse than they were before. Whereas it would be more sensible if they were to say, Let's leave Piccadilly as it is and concentrate on taking the traffic some distance away from it on a proper road designed for that traffic. Piccadilly would then revert to something more like its former condition. This would shunt off energy—energy meaning money and people and everything—away from the existing congestion. You find the same thing in principle right throughout the country: the local civic engineer is constantly tinkering about with his High Street, putting bus shelters up, erecting railings, concreting some areas, ripping up cobbles somewhere else, setting aside parking places, and so on. Whereas a couple of streets away it's derelict or of very little value, and if he were to build a new shopping street there with shops properly serviced from the rear, accessible by bus, with off-street parking, then the big multiple shops would be attracted to it and the historical High Street area could go back to its Saturday market, the camera shop, the small grocer, and so on. Maybe part of it would die, and then you could open up spaces, or some houses which had had shop-fronts bashed in them could revert to being houses again.

"This is an extension of the general architectural principle that when you're in a jam you don't add something, but take something away. When you're working on a door and you suddenly find that you're getting too many bits of wood or something, the usual thing is that it's a temptation, almost a kind of English sin, to add another piece to make it work; but actually in the end it just looks as though you've got too many bits of wood. If you take something away you usually find there's a simple way of doing it that you hadn't thought of. This doesn't apply to all problems but it certainly does when you have mechanisms involved.

"In London they seemed fixated by this high prestige box formed by Oxford Street, Regent Street, Piccadilly, and Park Lane, which you can hardly get into by car at the moment, really. But even if they do put tunnels under to Jermyn Street and all that stuff they'd be servicing something that's already basically obsolete: most of these big shops in Oxford Street are already, you might say, steam age as shops: you can see the pattern in America, in Chicago, where often the top two or three storeys of some of these huge department stores are just not being used, they're empty.

"There's only so much energy, money and talent in any one generation, and it's useless pouring it into these places, tinkering with old things, whereas if you went to South London now, maybe a mile and a half back from the river, and whacked in a huge road with proper takeoffs, proper connections to all the roads right through Kent and Sussex, with big out-of-town parking places from which you could catch a tube in, and invited developers to come in as they liked: this would draw off energy from the centre. And it must be a big operation, like Nash and Regent Street and Regents Park: Nash pushed a great big road through, built a park and surrounded it by houses: he didn't bother about cleaning up Bankside or small things like that. Yet the Greater London Council has more power to raise money and buy land than ever Nash and the Prince Regent had. It could be done.

"Now the speculators move into existing prestige areas but they don't build prestige: you know, people went to Mayfair because it had lovely squares once upon a time, and then it became fashionable and people said, If we go there we'll be fashionable: but as soon as they moved in they demolished the very values for which they went there. So you end up with a Bloomsbury for instance which is uninhabitable: London University didn't have to go there and knock it all down and big-build, they could have gone north of Euston Road where the property was almost derelict. Now they've destroyed the old integral space pattern and haven't replaced it with a new one: all they've got is an old one ruined. And that's a university doing it: and the State does it, too, the local authorities do it: it isn't only all the wicked developers moving in. Why can't these people establish some values which allow for the survival of others? Big companies like Shell are the same. No new values have been created by the Shell Centre on the South Bank: if you walk across there there's this mishmash of pavements and railing and manholes and steps, windy corners and hydrant points, odd pumping houses and woofers that they haven't been able to integrate. This sort of thing sets... not a standard, but a precedent: people think they can put that sort of thing up and get away with it. Yet it could have been so good with all that money and acreage to deploy! Shell weren't speculating, either, trying to make money out of the building. Now the whole site has been utterly compromised. The LCC building was never much good to to start with, but now it looks almost brilliant compared with the great masses of Shell, The Festival Hall looking uglier each year, and Waterloo always was the worst London terminus. The whole thing has been an example of lack of collective thinking at its worst, resulting in complete incompatibility."

The Smithsons believe that the only thing capable of pulling London together, structurally, to make the scattered city more like an entity, is a network of motorways. These urban motorways would also serve to move traffic from the present centres of congestion, and bring new life to areas which are now depressed in one way or another. They have prepared a plan for such a network of new roads, on routes which exploit cheap land adjacent to railways (or if necessary over railways), previously unusable land like marshes, and the "backlands" or wasted land sometimes [continued overleaf left in odd pockets. Junctions for these roads are sited on or over railway sidings and cheap property: where land is not available exactly where it is needed, the roads merely cross without intersecting and interconnection is made elsewhere, always with the object of avoiding present areas of congestion to divert traffic away from them. Architecturally the roads are intended to present a clear pattern in themselves, and as the same principles apply throughout, it is hoped that the pattern would be apparent in spite of the many versions of junctions, takeoffs, and so on which are necessary to meet the complex conditions of an already existing city. When two roads have to cross, the junction is so designed that only one decision can be made on each approach road: the decision to turn the other way either has been made further back in the system, or will be made further on in the system. The motorways are routed to provide a series of identifying fixes, or places where a relationship to the city structure could be observed: for example, the route along the Embankment provides fixes on Westminster and the city, and the route across Hyde Park does the same for the central area. The existing raised portion of the M4 at Chiswick is a built example of what the Smithsons mean by such a road re-defining places in relation to each other, such places as Osterley Park and Brentford Football Ground now being able to be seen in relationship to each other and to the road in a way which was not possible before.

Routing these roads through the "backlands" is intended to help regenerate old areas by increasing land values: this would happen especially round takeoffs, where increased accessibility and new facilities for garages, hotels and so on would provide new incentives to redevelopment. To serve these takeoffs, the existing street net has been organized into "Stop" streets (mainly shopping streets which are also bus routes, two-way, with picking up and setting down permitted, and metered parking provided where possible) and "Go" streets (often the present "taxi" routes, which have been organized into a system of one-way streets feeding into the takeoffs with no stopping and no parking whatsoever.) The "Stop" streets, which are really those in which the route itself has no function, would then serve the buildings and the functions of the street itself: there would be frequent pedestrian crossings, lay-bys, and car park entrances. Intersections on the "Go" streets would be controlled by lights, with filters wherever possible to keep the one-way system flowing.

This London road plan, the Smithsons feel, should be supplemented by a public transport survey, but in any case they envisage a rapid transit bus system to serve the whole central area: the buses would never leave the motorway network, there being alighting points at suitable takeoffs at that level about a quarter of a mile apart and also at railway stations and Green Line termini. Such a system of rationalized, subsidized mass transit facilities already works well in Philadelphia, where two lanes of the urban motorways are reserved for high speed buses.

There is nothing unfeasible about this plan: it would be expensive, but so is the congestion existing at the moment and which becomes inexorably worse each month. But such a system of urban motorways introduces into the city an element on an entirely new scale, the Smithsons believe, a geographical scale which seems to make the old sort of building totally inappropriate and which implies a new kind of interlocking town-structure/architectural form about which they have spent much time evolving theories.

These theories have found their most complete expression in a plan for the rebuilding of the City of Berlin made in collaboration with Peter Sigmonde, a plan which won third prize in a competition organized by that City, and was the only non-German entry to win a prize, incidentally. In this plan the function of urban motorways to unify and define a city rather than merely to relieve congestion is seen in its most convincing form. A ring of them serve a central area of access roads, upon the net of which is superimposed a pedestrian platform net some 30 feet above the ground, from which it is reached by escalators. The shape of this city is the reverse of a conventional one, having an inverted profile: that is, the centre is flat, with a single symbolic identifying fix (somewhat like a navel), with a "wall" of high office buildings on the outskirts linked to both roads and the pedestrian platform. Green zones define but do not divide the parts. Growth and change are built into this city concept: each sort of development has its rules by which addition and variation are controlled in an organic manner.

Such a plan was evolved from many years of continuous objective analysis of the structures created by man and the changes which take place in them in an attempt "to uncover a pattern of reality which includes human aspirations."

This analysis has also led to the formation of a series of 15 Criteria for Mass Housing, criteria which have that sort of simplicity which make them appear obvious until it is remembered that no single dwelling in the country measures up to them:

- 1 Does the housing liberate the inhabitants from old restrictions or straitjacket them into new ones?
- 2 Can the individual add identity to his house or is the architecture packaging him?
- 3 Will the lampshades on the ceilings, the curtains, the china dogs take away from the meaning of the architecture?
- 4 Is the means of construction of the same order as the standard of living envisaged in the house?

- 5 Are the houses moulded exactly to their purpose or are they by-products of structural tidiness or plastic whim?
- 6 Is there a decently large open-air sunlit space opening directly from the house?
- 7 Can the weather be enjoyed? ("The English climate is characterized by changeability: therefore a house should be capable of grasping what fine weather it can get: south windows into all rooms and easy access to sheltered patios, roof gardens or terraces which can be arranged to catch the pleasures of our climate and then closed up in a moment so that we can ignore it")
- 8 Can the extension of the dwelling (garden, patio, and so on) be appreciated from inside?
- 9 Is there a place in the open air where a baby can be left?
- 10 Where do 3-5 year-olds play?
- 11 Can the houses be put together in such a way as to contribute something to each other?
- 12 Is the house as comfortable as a car of the same year?
- 13 Is there a place where you can clean or wash things without making a mess of the whole house?
- 14 Is there enough vital storage: that is, storage not of a purely residual nature like lofts, built-in fittings?

- 15 Is there a place for the belongings peculiar to the class of the occupant: poodles, ferrets, motorbikes, geraniums, and so on?

That these reasonable criteria are not those of every form of housing erected in Britain is a condemnation of every responsible authority or private builder.

Only in painting, sculpture and (to a lesser extent) music have the pioneers of the Modern Movement become the establishment in their respective arts. In literature and in architecture the reactionaries who use the techniques of Dickens and put up Shell Centres are still not only in the majority but even represent these arts to many people. Thus Alison and Peter Smithson are faced with a multiple problem: not only to overcome the opposition of reactionaries to a previous generation, but also to have ideas accepted which are an extension and development of those of that generation. Just to come by the requisite experience is difficult enough:

"Really, if you talk about it strategically, dealing with London as it now exists and thinking of what's going to happen between now and 1980, say, then you speak of something we've simply not had any experience of. No one can say much about it because you have to be given the responsibility before you can think about it meaningfully, that is, you have to say, What could you actually do?"

With so much theoretical work of obvious validity and importance done over the decade and more since their manifesto, and with one practical example of it built showing what could be done with London, is it not time that the solutions to urban renewal and mass housing put forward by the Smithsons were given urgent, even desperate, consideration? It may not be so disastrous that advances in literature fail to be consolidated: but those in architecture involve more serious and fundamental elements determining the basic quality of living, and we simply cannot afford to ignore anyone who has anything to say as practical and original as Alison and Peter Smithson.

All your life you'll remember the Bahamas

When the winter weather is at its worst, escape to the happiest climate in the world...fly away to Nassau and the Resort Islands of the Bahamas, where every month's July. See your Travel Agent now

IN LONDON IT'S WINTER.

But step on a BOAC Super VC10 any day and just eleven hours away it's still July—in Nassau. (Yes, 70° to 80° twelve months out of twelve). Wake to the heavy scent of jasmine. Breakfast on canteloupe, pineapple and ripe papaya. Take a Surrey and explore historic forts. Photograph tame flamingoes marching in formation in Ardastra Gardens. Want a souvenir? Buy a conch shell from a native sloop moored in the waterfront bazaar; or shop in the world-famous Straw Market for a raffia hat to protect you from the sun.

Choose a first-class hotel in Nassau itself (so many to choose from) or get away from it all on one of the irresistible Resort Islands. Stay at a Country Club, rent a self-contained cottage on an endless Bahamian beach. Wherever you go, the enthusiasm and warm hospitality of the Bahamians will immediately put you at your ease. You'll meet wonderful people, make wonderful friends. FINEST FISHING IN THE WORLD By the sea. Swim. Or relax, blissfully, on pink and white powdered sands. You'll get the sun tan you've dreamed about. Action-packed fishing? The world's finest. Big game. Marlin, tarpon, wahoo and the elusive, but prized, bonefish. Every fisherman's a lucky fisherman in the Bahamas. Play golf. Tennis. Go motor-racing—Nassau Speed Weeks are held every winter. Sail, ski. Go island-hopping: Eleuthera, Abaco, Exuma. Call on the Obeah man (witch-doctor) of Cat Island—and mind what you say! Skin-dive for lost Spanish gold off Crooked Island, Mayaguana and Caicos, where, did you know it, the Santa Cruz went down with a cargo of bullion in 1694. Play for high stakes in the fabulous Monte Carlo Room on Grand Bahama. A Bahamas Airways ticket will take you anywhere you want to go.

LAZY DAYS AND LIVELY NIGHTS Evening. Eat alfresco under a Tropic of Cancer sky. Watch a floor show that features fire dancers, a steel band, (with a beat you can't resist), or an aqua show. Nassau's night-spots are alive, exhilarating—you won't get home till the small hours. Columbus discovered the Bahamas in 1492. This is your year. Discuss the winter holiday of a lifetime with your Travel Agent. He'll tell you how to get there, by air, or cruise there and fly back. If you would like to study details first at home fill in the coupon below. All your life you'll remember the Bahamas.

for weekends or longer.

I have just returned from another 'perfect get-away-from-it-all weekend', where I always meet fun-loving and interesting people; I played croquet on the lawn, had crumpets for tea and won a little at Roulette in the evening; the food's delicious, the cellar excellent; don't take my word for it alone.—

SHOPPING NEWS

Pat and Stewart Perkins plan to open a shop for children's clothes in Upper Montagu St in November. It will probably be called Little People. A year ago they started the Little People Postal Boutique, 8 Cavendish Pl, Cavendish Sq, W.1, selling children's clothes by mail order. The clothes are pretty and not expensive, and will be stocked in their shop, augmented by more luxurious garments, such as tiny fur coats

David Milnaric's antique and furnishing shop in Lower Sloane St is due to open about the middle of Nov. It will be on two floors—antiques in the basements, and fashions in decorating and furniture on the ground floor

Wallpaper Manufacturers Ltd will exhibit their new designs for 1966 from 10 Nov to 10 Dec. The show, called Wallpapers, '66, will be at 82 Piccadilly, W.1, and will be open to the public on weekdays from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. It will feature papers by Crown, Sanderson and Shand Kydd

Laura Esmond, 163 Draycott Av, SW 3 (KNI 3386), is a new boutique mainly for women's clothes, but also for men's shirts. It is the Chelsea equivalent of the Donald Davies Boutique in Mayfair, and has a large selection of Donald Davies shirts, dresses, long skirts and trousers in Irish tweed. Colours are especially varied and mixable

The Show-Biz Boutique, Kilgannon Suite, 2nd floor, 15 Hanover Square, W.1 (GRO 2352) opened on 6 October. It is a small boutique catering for individual taste, and run by Jean Inglis, who has been in show business herself since she was eleven, appearing among other parts as Principal Boy in panto. The atmosphere is informal, rather like shopping in a private house; among the stock are hats by James Wedge, shoes by Moya Bowler, suits by Louis Henry and Roger Nelson, underwear designed by Jean Inglis herself
